DAHLIAS

...SPRING 1917...

BRIGHTNESS

C. C. MORSE & CO.

125 Market Street San Francisco

The Dahlia at last occupies a position second to no other plant in our Western gardens. Owing to its free blooming habits, freedom from serious diseases, and the ease with which the few insects that attack it can be overcome, it is one of the most valuable plants for the home garden.

To successfully grow Dahlias they should not be planted before the 15th of April. Tubers should be planted in a slanting position with the eye or sprout about five inches below the surface and about three feet apart. Keep the soil well worked around the plants, apply a mulch of good manure, and give a little extra water as soon as buds appear. While we use every possible care in selecting our stock, we will not be responsible otherwise than where the plant is not true to label, and then only to the value of the original bulb.

Kindly notify us as soon as possible of any error.

Our customers will find the following list of Dahlias the cream of the Coast. Many new varieties, including a large consignment of imported stock, will be added to this list in our Fall Dahlia catalog, and will be exhibited at the 1917 Dahlia Shows.

CACTUS

Cactus. These sorts have long petals, sometimes coming in irregular shapes, putting one in mind of the Chrysanthemum flower. They are all very free in bloom and are very valuable for cutting, their many beautiful colors being very generally admired. For a small amount of labor we know of no flower that will give such returns.

PAEONY DAHLIAS

Paeony Flowered. This type of Dahlia has been received with a great deal of pleasure by the plant-loving community. They have large flowers with, as a rule, two rows of petals, somewhat ragged in appearance, producing their flowers in wonderful profusion, and for a long period.
